TRAVEL GROUP MEETS

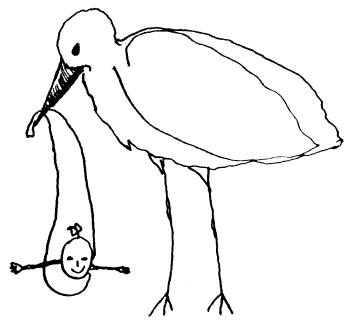
Members of the Virginia Travel Coordinating Committee of the State Chamber of Commerce are shown at their meeting on March 18. It was the first time that the Highway Department was represented in the group, which meets monthly to try to coordinate the efforts of all agencies concerned with the travel industry. Information stations at rest areas on the interstate system are of major concern to the committee.

Seated, from the left, are G. L. Baughan, highway commissioner from the Staunton District; Douglas P. Smith, of the State Chamber; Dorothy L. Nelson, of the Virginia Travel Council; Stuart White, of the Department of Conservation and Economic Development; and Capt. G. Alvin Massenberg, of the State Chamber. Standing are Irby Hollans, of the State Chamber; J. P. Mills, Jr., traffic and planning engineer; and H. T. Graves, of the Virginia Travel Company. State Chamber of Commerce photo.

The Stork Stopped at the Plaza

The Hampton Roads Bridge-Tunnel reported another first on March 16–the first baby to be born on or in the harbor crossing.

The rendezvous with the stork took place in Lane Six of the Toll Plaza at one-thirty in the morning. The mother, a Poquoson resident, was being driven by her mother to a Norfolk hospital. When they reached the plaza the Phoebus Rescue Squad was hastily summoned, and five minutes after the ambulance arrived the driver and an assistant delivered a baby girl.

The young lady was promptly named "Miss Hampton Roads Bridge-Tunnel of 1965," and the question has been raised whether she should be entitled to a lifetime pass over the facility.


The stork, unimpressed by honors or honorariums, had other business to attend to.
